

Overview

Literacy is the ultimate goal of our education system and our organization.

"When children learn language, they are not simply engaging in one kind of learning among many; rather they are learning the foundation of learning itself." [Halliday, 1993]

Current Facts About the Education System

- There are only about 48% children in level II or higher who can read.
- Close to 20% children can only read letters or not even that
- 14% can read words but not sentences
- 19% can read sentences but not longer texts

Keeping this problem as the focus of our research, efforts are being made to reform language and literacy instruction through empirical and theoretical understandings.
